Professor Eeva Furman is the Friend of the United Nations of the Year 2020

Professor Eeva Furman has been given the honor of being the Friend of the UN of the Year. The Friend of the UN is now nominated for the fourth time. The previous Friend of the UN was the President of the Republic Sauli Niinistö. The nomination is awarded by the Friends of the UN in Finland network.

Professor Eeva Furman is the director of the Environmental Policy Center at the Finnish Environment Institute (SYKE). He is also the chairperson of the Finnish Sustainability Panel. Furman receives an honor of being the Friend of the UN for her extensive work in promoting sustainable development. "I have worked for international environmental protection my entire career. I have seen that it is work for peace."

Furman has assessed the state of sustainable development in an independent group of 15 top experts appointed by the UN. For four years, the group examined what countries and the UN should do to change the current world development path and steer it on a sustainable path. The research team gave its report to world leaders last year and found the situation serious. "We need great societal system change," says Furman. "The UN Sustainable Development Goals serve as a compass for change."
